MINNESOTA POLL WILL BE WEATHER VANE FOR NATION
HARMONY OR DISCORD IN NEXT CONGRESS AT STAKE.

IS WITHIN PARTY
Harding Republicans Will Push Preus Candidacy in Gopher State.

By DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright, 1923, by Janesville Daily Gazette.

Washington.—The special election of a United States senator, to be held soon, is taking on the proportions of a national campaign. Fortunately or unfortunately, the special election will bring to a climax, fully a year ahead of the 1924 presidential campaign, two phases of national politics that cannot but have important influence on the future of President Harding.

First, has the former discomfited of the west subsided? If it has, Mr. Harding's prospects are immeasurably improved. Second, is the former discontent still as potent as it was last autumn, when Senator Brookhart went down and Senator La Follette, Wisconsin, if it is, then the chances of harmony in the next congress, where the La Follette group holds the balance of power, seems pretty good for the accomplishment of anything important and means a constant bombardment of the Harding cabinet.

Eight Within Party
The death of a veteran, Knute Nelson, whose record of independence in the United States senate was unparalleled, yields a controversy over a successor that would have attracted only perfunctory interest were it not for the surprising defeat administered to Senator Frank B. Kellogg last autumn.

Usually when people talk about elections they think about a contest between republicans and democrats.

ARNOLD TRIAL ON AUGUST 7 IN SUPERIOR

Superior.—Trial of V. H. Arnold, former president of the bankrupt Madison Bond company, indicted by the federal grand jury last December on 31 counts, of using the mails to defraud, will be held in federal district court, Superior, Wis., on August 7, according to an announcement here from W. H. Dougherty, U. S. district attorney.

Presentations of evidence by both sides undoubtedly will cover two weeks, Mr. Dougherty declared. Witnesses for the state will include persons alleged to have been defrauded by the operations of the bond company, Mr. Dougherty said.

'Dry' Progressive Candidate in Field Against Blaine

Madison.—When the Wisconsin senate voted this week on the Tucker bill for repeal of the Severe prohibition enforcement statute it will draw the issue that is to figure most prominently in the next political campaign. Senator Herman J. Severson, father of the state's dry law declared today.

The attempt in the legislature to repeal the enforcement statute means the laying of a foundation for the fight that will involve the governorship in the legislature will have been both of the houses at the next session, Senator Severson said. He pointed out that the question of state enforcement of the prohibition law is going to be brought plainly before the people, and each candidate forced to express himself directly on this major issue.

"The assembly has voted for repeal of the state enforcement law," the senator declared. "One measure intended to make the state receiving favorable consideration by the senate. Gov. Blaine declared himself in favor of this defeated proposal.

"With this close alignment, prohibition enforcement is to be put to a direct test in the state in 1924. The contest for governor and for membership in the legislature will be based in large measure on this issue."

Senator Severson said that there was already talk of a "dry progressive" candidate for governor in opposition to Gov. Blaine, who, he said, is now definitely aligned with the wets. The senator said that the wets have made their position clear by voting to repeal the state enforcement statute.

He emphasized that the dries are prepared to meet the wet attack and will go into the next campaign on a clean-cut issue, with no evading on the part of any candidates. The outcome, he explained, involves such far-reaching considerations that these favoring prohibition will exert their full influence to gain control of the legislature and of the governorship.

Uncle Sam Piles up $200,000,000 Surplus in Year

(By Associated Press)
Washington.—The government has accomplished the task of living within its income in the last 12 months and has accumulated a surplus of $200,000,000 in addition, President Harding said Monday in a speech at a meeting of department heads and bureau and division chiefs, constituting the government's "business organization." Further reductions, he said, would be made in expenditure in the coming year. The record, the president said, is the more important since the fiscal year was inaugurated last July 1 with a deficit confronting the treasury of $323,000,000. To this "signal achievement," Mr. Harding declared, should be added the fact that, in addition to wiping out the deficit and accumulating a surplus, the campaign for efficiency and economy had resulted in actual expenditures of the government being cut $55,000,000 in the last 12 months, or less than the amount asked for below the ordinary expenditures for the year ending last June 30.

What has been done since in the way of economy and efficiency, the president said, was commendable, but he warned the assembled executives that they faced another year when tasks as difficult and problems as acute awaited solution if the government's policy of conducting affairs economically and efficiently was to be realized.

As compared with the estimate presented to congress, the appropriations for 1924 are but $7,825,000 less than the amount asked for in the budget and the estimates supplemental thereto. Action by congress on the estimates for 1924 therefore amounted to a practical ratification of the budget and the supplemental estimates.

200 JUNIORS IN COUNTY PIG CLUB

Delivery Day Held Here Saturday — A Battle of "Squeals."

More than 200 Rock county boys and girls were given the foundation start in the pure-bred swine business through the Junior pig club started Saturday when the spring gilts were distributed. The Rock county pig club, which combines the interest of the city residents, the breeder and the rural junior, is the largest junior club in the state. In all Rock county now has more than 400 rural boys and girls on club projects under the direction of the county advisory committee and the township supervisors.

Through club work Rock county is holding its position as an agricultural leader, for it past records are to hold true in the future, the club leaders of today will be the county leading breeders and farmers tomorrow.

Delivery day had its trials. There are more than 600 present for the club program and allotment of the gilts.

Draw for Swine. The drawing for the pigs took place in the high school under the direction of L. E. Jackson, H. C. Hemmingsway, J. C. Glendon, D. D. Antel, and J. C. Glendon. Each boy or girl took the same chance and up at the fair grounds breeders were "ear-tagging" the pigs to correspond to the number on the tickets in the pool.

Under the plan followed this year in Rock county the pigs are distributed practically free of cost. A city resident put up the stipulated $10 and for a contract with the junior for a year. The breeders are obligated to sell good gilts at $10 a head, furnishing registration papers in the juniors' name.

The only money put up by the junior is the $2 insurance which will be pro-rated back if there are no severe losses. At the end of the year the city resident will select a pig from the litter to be re-distributed out to a new club member and the brood sow and the rest of the litter becomes the full property of the club member as a start in the registered swine business.

In general there was a fine lot of pigs distributed out representing the Berkshire, Hampshire, Chester-White, Poland-China and Duroc-Jersey breeds. There was some difference in the ages, consequently in size. However the judging at fair time will be based on type and not size and the young pigs, properly fitted start on much show as the larger and older gilts.

Have Club Program. During the morning program held in the high school auditorium short speeches made by J. A. Craig, chairman of the county advisory committee and L. E. Jackson.

In a year or two all you boys and girls will be in the purebred swine business if you take proper care of these gilts," advised Mr. Craig. "Don't give up but keep going and in a short time it will be a partnership affair on your farm."

"Don't forget that the club pig and its progeny are your property. You are to have the profits and the stock for the animals will be registered in your name."

L. E. Jackson told of the importance of keeping the record books and outlined the proper feeding of the pigs to obtain the best results. Up at the fair grounds bedlam reigned for a time. All morning breed association representatives were getting the gilts ready for distribution and it was a "battle of squeals." Each pig was checked and papers inspected by the staff of workers.

After one o'clock the drawing over the club members started getting their pigs. More squeals as the pigs were caught and handed over to proud boys and girls. Several got loose from the young owners and there were merry chases to round up the elusive porker.

The pig club is the last of the five Rock county junior clubs to be put under way. There are nearly 200 more girls in the pig club as boys. Money for the club from the different cities has nearly all been collected. Within the next 10 days the city man will be signed on the contract and one copy returned to the club member. Under the terms of the contract the city resident is obligated to visit the rural boy or girl once a month during the club season.

There is no such thing coming in Minnesota. That's what makes the Minnesota contest national in aspect and significance. It's a fight inside the republican party between radicals or liberals and conservatives. The Farmer-Labor party, operating in the republican ranks, on the one hand, and the conservative interests of the state on the other meet in battle with the leaders of each group aware that, in an agricultural state of such size, the farmer vote is the deciding factor.

Farmers Are Divided. But the farmers themselves are divided into radicals and conservatives. The North Dakota experiment next door has been sufficiently notorious for radicals to boast its advantages and for conservatives to point out its perils. The election of Henrik Shipstead, the candidate of the Farmer-Labor party, last autumn was a surprise because it was thought the North Dakota doctrine were on the decline.

The real trouble is the Farmer-Labor party has frightened the disquiet of the farmer in much better fashion than have defenders of the existing regime in presenting promises of a program of relief. Senator Killebrew was a member of the "farm bloc" in the United States senate and has something to do with the pushing through congress of nearly every piece of legislation the federal farm bureau wanted. They endorsed him but still he didn't win.

Opponents Were Radicals. The answer is that his opponents went further and further to the left of radicalism and made him appear a conservative alongside of Shipstead.

Conditions are somewhat parallel today. Senator Shipstead has a candidate in the field, Senator La Follette will probably go to Minnesota to help clear said candidate, and the national republican machinery will be put behind Governor Preus who while not a stand-pat republican is nevertheless sufficiently popular in the state to win if any regular republican can.

Efforts to get President Harding to invade Minnesota in person have been futile. Politically could not afford to participate in the campaign in aid of Governor Preus. If the latter were defeated it would be a serious blow to the Harding campaign. If he wins, the Harding contingent will take all the credit anyhow.

Harding for Preus. The president, however, is not indifferent to what is going on in Minnesota. His speeches on the western trip, dealing with agricultural subjects, will be used in Minnesota by party workers who probably will seek to aid Preus by pointing out that the national administration at Washington wants him and needs him. But as for any definite commitment by Mr. Harding he cannot take the chance of increasing the number of natural foes he will have in the next senate where the margin of 10 or 11 votes is none too comfortable, especially when there is an insurgency already as formidable as that which broke up the Taft regime.

Minnesota's election is bound to have an important bearing on the presidential campaign as well as the legislative outlook for next session. Radicalism beaten in Minnesota means a rise in Harding stock. Radicalism triumphant means more trouble for Harding and incessant turmoil in the next congress.

Harding for Preus. The president, however, is not indifferent to what is going on in Minnesota. His speeches on the western trip, dealing with agricultural subjects, will be used in Minnesota by party workers who probably will seek to aid Preus by pointing out that the national administration at Washington wants him and needs him. But as for any definite commitment by Mr. Harding he cannot take the chance of increasing the number of natural foes he will have in the next senate where the margin of 10 or 11 votes is none too comfortable, especially when there is an insurgency already as formidable as that which broke up the Taft regime.

Minnesota's election is bound to have an important bearing on the presidential campaign as well as the legislative outlook for next session. Radicalism beaten in Minnesota means a rise in Harding stock. Radicalism triumphant means more trouble for Harding and incessant turmoil in the next congress.

JUNE BIG MONTH FOR NEW FAMILIES

More Newcomers Reported by Attendance Officer, Fewer Leaving City.

June, when concluded, will go on record as being one of the greatest months of the past year for gain in population in Janesville, according to the attendance department records at the high school. While the May record does not show any gain in population, it will be more than made up for in June. Entrants during the month of May were smaller than during April, and withdrawals were about the same, making the census enrollment stand exactly the same June 1 as on May 1. Ten families, with 16 children entered, and six families, with 35 children left the city. In April, 30 children and their parents left town. One died during May.

Truancy was bad again in May, as it was the preceding month, says James Economy, night attendance officer. Figures for the past four months, including May, for cases reported for investigation, are 109, 116, 21 and 22. Several cases of non-attendance were reported against 103 of the month before. Truancy was slightly higher, 12 as compared with 13. Miss Economy is still at a loss to understand the sudden jump in number of truancy cases, coming out of a clear sky after a winter of unusual calmness.

Incurability was the same in number—four cases but many, more visits to homes were necessary. Miss Economy making 113 as compared with 92 of the month before. Four fewer visits to school were made, figures being 18 and 14, while for visits to other agencies the figures are April, 7; for May 12.

New residents in the city came from many Wisconsin cities—Milwaukee, Neillsville, Shepore, Willowdale and rural sections from Nevada, O. Jackson, Ill., Mason City, Ia., Pennsac and Monticello, Minn. Occupations are carpenter, Chevrolet employee, factory manager, housekeeper, roentgenologist, salesman and truck driver.

Absence because of illness was strangely almost as great during May as in April. During April, 1,861 days were lost because of illness; May, 1,553. Excluding the heading of "unclassified" under which there were 374 days, contagion makes the largest item of illness, with 446 days lost; illness and death in family, 83; care of babies, missed bus, accidents, and many others. Figures for the past five months, including May, on loss of days because of weather is May, 87; April, 50; March, 3,774; February, 562; and January, 1.

81 Graduate at Beloit Tuesday

Beloit — Eighty-one students of Beloit college will receive diplomas Tuesday morning at the final exercise of commencement week. The presentation exercises will be held in the First Congregational church and will be featured by an address by W. H. McMillan, governor of North Dakota.

Alumni by the score returned to Beloit last week to attend the reunion and commencement services. Rev. Oscar Maurer, pastor of the famous Yale University church, New Haven, Conn., and an alumnus of the 1902, spoke Sunday morning at the First Presbyterian church. The baccalaureate address was given by the Rev. Charles H. Beale, Milwaukee, at the college chapel yesterday afternoon.

Reunions of the various classes were held this morning and at 9:30 o'clock the Orville-Rice public speaking contest was held in the college chapel. Meetings of the Alumni League, Delta Sigma Rho fraternity and other organizations were scheduled to be held throughout the day.

Interest in commencement is heightened by the fact that some announcement regarding a new president of the college is expected to be made by the trustees.

SPECIAL TERM OF COUNTY COURT OPENS Special June term of the Rock county probate court opens Tuesday before Judge Charles L. Pfeiffer. The will of Anos P. COUNCIL TO ACT ON PARK CONTRACT

Riverside to be Placed in Shape for Extensive Use by Citizens.

Meeting in bi-weekly session in the city hall at 7:30 Monday night, members of the city council are expected to take action whereby the citizens of Janesville may make full use of the 138-acre Riverside park tract purchased by the city last year. It is expected the council will authorize and approve a contract with some individual for making improvements in the grounds, policing them and taking charge of concessions. Councilman C. Starr Atwood will submit the various plans for consideration.

Another interesting matter scheduled for discussion is the city's position in the North Franklin street viaduct proposition. The railroad commission has ordered the railroad companies to build a new bridge before Dec. 31, 1923, the city to pay $15,000 of the cost. While the order calls for the opening of Franklin street to its full width at this point, it also gives the railroad companies the option of maintaining supporting piers at the curb or in the center of the street. As it is the off-center supporting column which is the chief source of complaint today, many who disapprove of the commission's action in allowing the maintenance of piers to continue.

Councilman George A. Jacobs' ordinance licensing public dance halls and giving of public dances was introduced at the last meeting and probably will be given further consideration tonight. Some objections are expected to be raised.

The Janesville Electric company's request for seeing that trees are trimmed to the proper height on streets where ornamental light posts are located is due to be heard, along with a proposal of the Wisconsin Telephone company to sell the underground conduit system of the old Rock County Telephone company to the city for $17,500. The system cost the Wisconsin company $40,000. Manager W. N. Cash says. It brought by the city, the system would be used for fire and police telegraph alarms and other municipal wires.

The council is not expected to take action at this meeting on the proposed milk pasteurization ordinance, although, it may come up for discussion.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Editor, Gazette:

I read a piece on the old age pension which I think is a very nice thing. There are many aged people in this place who have to toil to make their own living until old age has taken their strength away from them. They have been good citizens and have paid many a dollar for taxes to help keep up the poor house and the Blind Institute, to educate the blind.

I for one, an aged widow, have deprived myself of food so I could meet my taxes. I believe in letting one hand wash the other, but it is like him of others, who care only for themselves. I found that out when I was able to work. What does the Bible say? Thou shalt not be selfish. Thou shalt help one and others.

An Investment for the People.
In the meek and storm and stress which legislation is passing through at Madison it is to be hoped that the bill for the Northern Lakes park will not fall of passage and that the governor will affix his signature and make it a law. The measure has been favorably reported by the senate finance committee and may have a chance of passage during the closing weeks of the session.

We have been so overly careful in Wisconsin about the expenditure of public funds for parks and the preservation of those natural beauties of the state and the historic sites, that we should begin at this date to inaugurate a schedule to cover a period of years for natural playgrounds. The Northern Lakes park is the last bit of available primeval woods of the state. It is typical of great stretches which once called into being the most important of our early industries. We do not need to put the investment on commercial grounds. There is something greater, nobler in the proprietorship of a tract like the Northern Lakes park—the very satisfaction in having it for our own and the preservation of a work of Omnipotent art in the gallery of all out doors. We have still other places which should belong to the state. Wild wastes of cut over lands having no value for agriculture but which have been used to allure investments from settlers, who later, broken in health and purse have returned to old homes cheated out of their last dollar, will some day be set aside for raising more forests.

It is time we began on a regular program. The legislature is presented with the opportunity now to take advantage of this privilege of purchase and add greater fame to scenic Wisconsin.

Al Smith has made the discovery that New York state, while large, is not all, but only one, of these United States.

The Lasker Joy Ride.

It is hard for one out in the corn belt and the dairy section, far removed from seashore, and European trips, and liners and all that, to get a clear idea of what Albert Lasker, recent head of the shipping board, intends to accomplish with a trip on the Leviathan bearing 500 or more guests and costing as he says, $105,000, and others charge at $400,000. The Leviathan has been refitted at a cost of $8,000,000. It is too late to get the ship into the early big European business. The ship was sent from Newport News to Boston and behaved well. That was a trial trip. Lasker, who learned to run ships and sail great ocean liners by watching whalebacks and lumber scows on the Chicago river as he waited for the bridge to turn, thinks it is necessary for a trial trip and thoroughly disliking a lonesome voyage, invited several hundred statesmen to go along.

Charged with this extravagance he has replied that the whole scheme was a democratic one instigated by the Wilson shipping administration headed by John Barton Payne. Mr. Payne says it is ridiculous and he did not even want the Leviathan fixed up but sold and would have sold the ship which looks much like an elephant on the government's hands had Mr. Hearst not enjoined the sale. So there we are. Mr. Lasker says he is going to sail anyway, criticism or no criticism. Congressmen and others see in it a grand joy ride with all trimmings furnished. They are eager for the trip. Of course it may be that a ship which has cost so much needs a trial trip. If so, Mr. Lasker who has resigned, is undoubtedly the man to go along with a bunch of corned congressmen and pass a verdict as to whether the $8,000,000 is well spent or has been wasted. It may be worth $400,000 to teach a congressman the difference between the bow and stern of a ship. To the persons who live out in the west and are trying to make ends meet and be able to pay the tax on the diver gasoline, it would seem that $400,000 is quite a lot of money to pay for a week's view of the ocean. We have grown used to the extravagance, high salaries of employees, waste and general misadministration of the shipping department of the government. It is not a partisan matter but has been so from the very beginning when the billion dollars worth of wooden ships were started, and sold for a song later.

For Mr. Lasker to hide behind a predecessor in office in an apparently unprovable statement is peanut politics. The trip is either justified or it is not; if not justified then Mr. Lasker could have stopped it and if justified should take the responsibility and not try to throw the onus on some one else. What the public sees is a joyride with its money spent to no purpose. The fact that Mr. Lasker tries to load blame elsewhere gives one reason to believe that the trip is not justified and that he is hatching several chickens which will come later to the republican roost.

Steel Workday Debate Renewed

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Washington.—In its report to the American Iron and Steel Institute, on the 12-hour day in the steel industry, the Gary committee prefaced its recommendation against a change to an eight-hour day with the statement that its findings were not final. The committee may or may not have been right in declaring a change to shorter hours was impracticable, not desired by the workers and unnecessary for the betterment of the workers and their families, but it certainly has not said the last word on the subject.

The debate as to the social justice and economic value of the 12-hour day has been started anew by the report and is waxing hot. Already two important pronouncements have been made public that take issue with the committee. The first broadside to be fired at the devoted heads of Judge Gary and his coadjutors in steel came from a conference of Protestant, Catholic and Jewish churches, representing approximately 50,000,000 church members and adherents in the United States. It is in effect a scathing arraignment of the committee. It points out that the committee does not refuse a single one of the arguments that have been advanced for the abolition of the 12-hour day, and declares the committee does not support the stand it has taken with a single word of expert opinion or testimony.

Moreover, the churches say that if it is true, the steel workers themselves are not asking for the eight-hour day, preferring the longer hours because of larger earnings, the only reason is that the workers fear or know they would be inadequately paid for an eight-hour basis. A living wage should go hand in hand with the shorter workday, according to the churches, who say Judge Gary and his associates apparently are more concerned about profits than about the welfare of their employees and society.

Naturally these critics of the Gary committee emphasize the ethical and social aspects of the question. The churches placed themselves on record long ago as favoring the shorter work day for steel workers and it is not surprising they are standing pat, if such an unchristianlike expression may be used.

The second bolt which the Gary committee received, came from the Federated American Engineering Societies. Hard on the heels of the statement from the church folk, the engineers made public a report of their committee on work periods, which declared the 12-hour day in the steel industry must be eliminated for the good of the industry and of labor. The findings of the committee, it was stated, were in direct contradiction to the report of the Gary committee.

The significance of this can not be over-emphasized. When the engineers speak, it must be remembered, we are hearing from the experts who are familiar with every aspect of steel production. They are the men upon whom the steel industry depends for the solution of every manufacturing problem. They may not have a voice in the financial administration of the great steel corporations, but when it comes to the making of steel what they say goes. And when they urged the adoption of the eight-hour day and maintained that the change would be for the good of the industry there was a marked tendency in personal interviews and editorial comment throughout the country to concede that they know what they are talking about.

To date, it is to be noted, Judge Gary and his conferees have made no reply either to the churchmen or to the engineers.

A Washington expert on industrial relations who is considered an authority on the hours of labor of which an efficiency says that the 12-hour day will be abolished in the steel industry just as soon as the men in control of the industry realize that it is the only solution of their labor turnover problem.

"The big problem of the steel industry just now," he said, "is where and how it is to get a steady supply of common labor with European immigration restricted as it is under the present law. Whatever the facts may be as to whether the 12-hour day is unduly hard on steel workers it is unquestionable that the turnover in the class of labor that is required to work such hours is enormous. Men do not stay long in those jobs and it is significant that Judge Gary is at the head and front of the movement that seeks to bring about an amendment of the immigration law so that there will be a return to the old days when there was a constant and abundant stream of labor pouring into the steel mills from Europe."

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

WHEN THE BABY SMILES AT YOU
Now the rising sun at morning is a glorious sight to see,
And there is a wealth of beauty in a blossom—
There are landscapes built to thrill you with their splendor night and day
And when you come upon them "Oh's" and
"Ah's" are all you say.

But the loveliest sight of all is that of one which thrills you through and through,
Is that glad smile of a baby when she wants to come to you.

There is nothing to excel it, not the rising sun
Nor the glitter and the splendor of the dew upon the lawn,
Nor the majesty of mountains with their jeweled
crowns of snow,
Nor the silver of the waters as they fall to the depths below—
These are not so captivating, though they're beautiful to view,
As the glad smile of a baby when she wants to
come to you.

Who's Who Today

HON. ARTHUR PONSONBY

The recent introduction into the house of commons by the Hon. Arthur Ponsonby of a bill to abolish hereditary titles created more of a sensation because of the social connections of its author than because of its somewhat revolutionary nature. The Hon. Arthur was at one time a page of honor to Queen Victoria, is related to many of the noble families of England and at one time took an active part in English society.

In his earlier political career he was a Liberal, but has since become an important member of the Labor party. His bill is not the first of its kind with which the British commons has had to deal.

Ponsonby was born February 18, 1871, and is the third son of the late General the Right Hon.
Sir Henry Ponsonby. His mother was a granddaughter of Earl Grey, one-time prime minister of England. He has one son and one daughter.

OPINIONS OF OTHERS

La Follette and the Presidential Nomination.
Probably it can be said of La Follette that he is more certain to be in the Presidential race than any other man. And with equal certainty it can be said he is more certain to lose than any other man already mentioned or likely to be mentioned. But this is not the point.
La Follette is putting his shoulder to the wheel of what he regards as a sacred duty.
La Follette is of that temperament that gathers intensity of determination from the very hopelessness of the fight. It is this that gives La Follette a value in our public life difficult to bear in mind, and hard to persuade others to concede at this time of great popular disapproval of him. The contribution that men of La Follette's temperament make to the world is of great value. Their courage, their unflinching determination, their unswerving loyalty—the contribution which they make in spite of all these qualities, is their willingness to give sustained expression to causes with which the majority of us disagree. The support and advocacy they give to little minorities who so frequently are almost savagely proscribed by our often intolerant majorities. The usefulness of men like La Follette—most desirable to remember in proportion as he is now deeply disapproved—that such men are willing to be the vehicle for the first expression of causes not yet popular, as well as for the last expression of causes that have lost and become outlawed. Any one of us who finds himself, in a moment of irritation, tempted to go to the extremes in uttering some word of violence, or to take action which he yields to a moment of thought in which to reflect that no one can tell when the occasion may arise in which La Follette's lone courage was the only one that the geography is that it exists in its solitariness—may be our only reliance to give voice to some great but temporarily unpopular need.—Mark Sullivan

FRUIT JUICES FOR THE BABY

When a baby is fed in whole or in part with pasteurized, sterilized, or bottled milk, it is necessary to give the baby some fresh fruit juice if possible, beginning when the baby is a few days old.

The fresh fruit juice (tomato juice is quite as good; the juice of tomatoes canned in a factory by the vacuum process, from as fresh as the fresh tomato) furnishes vitamins which seem to be essential for normal digestion, normal bowel function, normal growth and development of the infant. Just what the vitamins are, nobody has as yet determined, but they are naturally present in fresh milk and reduced or destroyed by boiling, sterilization or pasteurization. Concentrated and evaporated milk is generally poor in vitamins.

If mothers are compelled to give their babies substitutes for breast feeding or for pure cow's or goat's milk, the use of a few spoonfuls of some such fruit as part of the daily diet will be found to serve one good purpose which is obvious to nearly every mother, the prevention of constipation. When a baby is given a few spoonfuls of pure orange juice or some such fruit as part of the daily diet, the effects of boiled, sterilized, pasteurized or canned milk, only five to 10 drops should be given the baby at first, in a spoonful or two of water, then gradually increased.

Other fruit juices which serve as well as orange juice for this purpose are peach, pineapple, pear, apricot, and in every instance only fresh fruit being used.

Ordinarily it is advisable to begin feeding some such fresh fruit juice to a baby at the age of three months even though the baby is breast fed or receives unboiled or unpasteurized fresh milk, for the good effect of the fruit juice on the intestinal digestive function and for the iron in fruit juices.

A healthy baby may be fed a teaspoonful or two of the pulp of any of the fruits well stewed and strained through a sieve from the age of eight months or there abouts a week, and the quantity gradually increased. No uncooked fruit pulp or fruit of any kind should be fed to a baby under three years of age. The year old baby may take one or two ounces (rather less than one-third of a tumblerful) of any fresh fruit juice with his meals every day when he does not have stewed or baked apple or other cooked fruit pulp.

The juice of fresh berries or cherries may be given if the other fruit juices are not to be had, but orange, tomato and peach juices are probably the best.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Hard on the Hands.

Rug salesman in department store and skin of fingers is harsh, dry and cracked constantly. We have tried cold cream (United States Pharmacopoeia), glycerin, rose water, petrolatum, but have not been able to get relief. They do not help. A friend has suggested that the hands be soaked in a solution of the dyes in the rug. (E. R. F.)

Answer.—The dyes will not do any harm. The only danger is of ordinary infection such as may occur to the hands with a crack or abrasion of the skin. Perhaps if your father will use only soft soap (green soap) and wash thoroughly, and then apply a little glycerin, rubbing it in well, and wiping off the excess with a clean cloth, before beginning work and after finishing work, it will help.

Disinfecting Drinking Water.

Some time ago you printed some questions for determining if water is fit to drink. It was something simply dissolved in a cup of water. Please repeat the directions, as we are preparing for an automobile outing trip. (J. E. B.)

Answer.—I told how any water may be disinfected for drinking purposes, not how to determine whether a sample of water is polluted or contains typhoid or cholera germs. (E. R. F.)

What is the difference between rupture and hernia? Is a paraffin tincture better than iodine? (E. R. F.)

Answer.—Rupture, hernia and breach are three terms for the same thing. If you mean the injection of iodine for an afflu in the hope of curing the rupture or hernia, that would be a dangerous experiment. Operation is the only cure for hernia in adults, and is safer than the hernia uncured.

HOROSCOPE

TUESDAY, JUNE 19, 1923

The Sun in beneficent rule dominates today, according to astrology.

It is a time most auspicious for seeking aid from a good man, and the near-great. Even bankers are likely to feel obliging.

Aspirants for political preferment should benefit by this posting of the stars, which encourages these who are not timid about asking favors.

Those who seek employment should go forth with the assurance that the Sun smiles on them. He who falls today has little talent or merit to sell.

According to ancient lore this way should be most fortunate for seeking whatever is lost—even lost love.

Those who have advance notices to send out or who desire to profit through personal publicity should not lose a minute of this peculiarly fortunate day.

During this rule it should be exceedingly helpful to the selfish if they practice thinking of others. This may lead to good fortune from unexpected sources.

The giving of presents is well governed under this direction of the stars, bringing pleasure and even rewards to donors.

Venus is in a place that should bring special good fortune to Canada and other British colonies which will have reason to rejoice because of remoteness from the British isles.

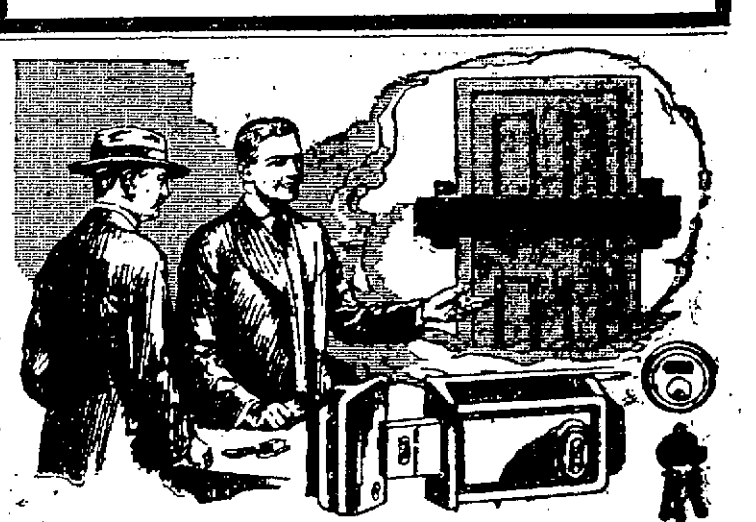

BELOIT GAS RATES CUT

Beloit—Voluntary reductions in the gas rates of the Beloit Water, Gas and Electric company were announced Saturday. The reductions amount to 10 cents per thousand cubic feet for the first 5,000 cubic feet per month and 5 cents per thousand cubic feet for consumers of the next 10,000 cubic feet.

Household users of gas will get the benefit of the 10 cent reduction in gas for the reason that practically all come within the 5,000 cubic feet class.

The reduction was made in line with a policy of the Beloit company to make voluntary reductions whenever possible. The act has received the approval of the railroad commission.

New Service Fitted to New Possibilities

WE move swiftly in America—change is the order of the day—industrial economies are changing—labor relationships are changing. The size of the oil business is changing and the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) keeping step with progress, is changing its methods of doing business, to meet the new conditions as they arise.

We invent, and improve, and learn, and go ahead.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) developed the Burton Process to increase the recovery of gasoline to meet the demand caused by the increasing number of automotive machines. It improved merchandising methods until its distribution and marketing systems are the standard of efficiency for the industry.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) developed new methods of handling its business. Many of these are applied to administration inside the organization, — as for instance, the Industrial Relations Plan, the Annuity Plan, and the Stock Purchasing Plan, all of which have resulted in bringing the Company and its employees closer together.

Other methods have expanded the Company's activities in new directions, — as for instance, in the development of a chain of service stations located at convenient points throughout the ten Middle Western states where the motorist may secure his requirements of fuel and oil in such quantities as he may need.

This is but one of the many improvements which the Company has adopted to better the service which it is rendering the people of the Middle West.

All these methods tend to hold down prices. This is recognized in a recent article in Petroleum Age which says, "No other product or power of like value, obtained under such conditions, is furnished the people at such reasonable prices at all points of the country, as oil and its products."

In the petroleum industry the real problem of the hour is service. The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is continuing its efforts to develop new possibilities and adapting its established service to meet new conditions. This policy makes for prosperous business, without which no nation can hope for general prosperity.

As the demand for petroleum products increases, it will be found that the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has put itself, by progressive development of new possibilities, in a position to give a service commensurate with the increasing demand.

The Fly Is Your Enemy

Flies are not only annoying but are actually dangerous to health because they spread communicable diseases. They are an indication of unclean, insanitary conditions, and improper disposal of substances in which they breed. They should be fought and fought in the right way.

The Bureau of Entomology has made an exhaustive study of houseflies and the most effective means of eliminating them and has printed the results of its investigation in a 24-page booklet with illustrations. Girl of Ghost Mountain

By J. ALLAN DUNN

Author of "A Man to His Mate," "Rimrock Trail," "The Man Trap."

Copyright by Small, Maynard and Company, and published by arrangement with McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

Mary Burrows, with a giant Swedish girl, Thora, lives on the plateau on top of Ghost Mountain in Arizona. Peter Sheridan, New York lawyer, with tuberculosis, has bought a ranch in the Arizona desert, and is recovering his health. His inseparable companion is Red Jackson, foreman of the ranch. They rescue a Chinaman, Quong, from the clutches of some water-turtle rustler. Peter finds a way to the ranch on top of the mountain and falls in love with Thora. Hollister, a wealthy kidnaping party, takes Thora to the Bonanza mine. On the way he drinks poison mescal and goes blind, and is rescued later by Peter. He has ridden after her. Tales of marvelous gold in the canyon are told. Quong, who was once the keeper of a gambling house in San Francisco, reveals the location of the cave and the gold there ready to be taken out. Sheridan and others form an expedition to go in search of the treasure.

"We've got to sink a shaft," he said, still revolving the problem for a better solution. "They might find the mass like a Swiss cheese with shafts without hitting the main body. What's your judgment?"

"Juan's horse was lame," said the Chinaman. "He had fallen a good way behind in that last rush. Yet he saw the wagons in the gap. They may have slowed up a bit, but they must have been well in towards the cave."

"Ah!" Sheridan's eyes lit up. "Juan said there was a network of communicating caves. Suppose we tackle the inside of the White Chapel? It may lead in the right direction. If it does we can't be able to use the dynamite. Worth trying, at any rate."

"It's a hunch!" cried Red enthusiastically catching up a pick. "Bring the rest of the stuff along, hom-bros."

The entrance to the White Chapel was a fissure crack, leading back as a narrow passage some twenty feet to a great cave. The floor covered with silt, its walls convoluted but smoothed by floods, the ceiling higher than the rays of the electric torches could define.

Half pillars bossed out from the sides, there were vaulted openings that seemed to lead to inner chambers. Sheridan directed his efforts to the western wall and to the rounded corner where that curved off against the back of the cave. Three torches sprayed white light

Wave and Sheen

For any hair, quick and lasting

By Edna Wallace Hopper

My glorious hair with its fluff and gloss is envied by countless women. Most hair at my age is dull and dead, while mine is like a curly-headed child's.

Naturally my hair is straight. If left untouched, it would appear lusterless and flat. But years ago French experts told me how to keep it curly. Later, other experts told me how to give it shine. Then finally they combined these two effects in a liquid, I call my Hair Dress.

I apply it with a tooth brush or comb. When my hair was long, I then wrapped it on curlers and the curls would remain for a week. Now, with bobbed hair, I either use curlers, or I simply comb the strands upward, and I get instant wave and sheen.

I have tried Hair Dress on countless friends on the stage and in society. To the straightest hair it gives a lasting curl. To the dulled hair it gives enduring gloss. So I know that wavy, glowing hair like mine can come to any woman.

Now I offer this tried-out method, the very means I long have used to get the hair which millions have admired.

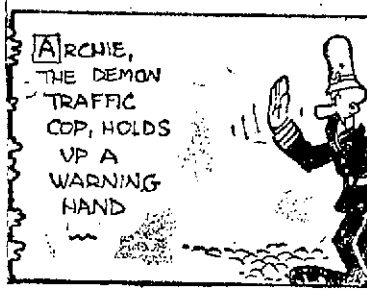

My Hair Dress is a scientific product, based on the latest of hair study. It contains no grease, no oil. It was perfected by authorities who command respect. I abhor and avoid, as all women should, all the crude ways to beautify hair.

All toilet counters sell my Hair Dress; under guarantee. If the first bottle fails to satisfy, they return your money. Go see what a change it makes in your hair. Ask for Edna Wallace Hopper's Hair Dress—price, 75 cents.

Heart and Home Problems

Letters May be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: My husband and I have been running around with a crowd of young married couples. We have gone to each other's homes for parties, to dances and to shows, and probably we have all been together at least twice a week.

The wife of one of the men in the crowd went to visit her mother for a month and when she came back we all got off the train she kissed all of us men and all. I didn't think it was proper for her to kiss the men. My husband, disagreeing with me and says that her kisses were merely of a friendly nature and didn't mean anything one way or another. What do you think about the matter?

ROSE LIE.

Your husband was right in his way of classifying the woman's kisses. It seems to me, however, that it would have been much better if she had kissed only her husband because then her kiss to him would have meant something.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young girl 17 years old. I am a very good-looking and I have a fairly good shape. Only my legs are simply awful. I am around with two girls who aren't pretty but have such plump legs. It makes me heartless and I sit down and cry often, which I know is very foolish.

Could you tell me any way in which I could pad them so as to make them look big and plump and nice? I don't do it so that I can wear silk stockings and one couldn't tell the difference. I have studied and I cannot figure out how to do it. I know little slender legs are just awful. I need your advice.

DON'T FIDGET

It's easy enough to tell a girl to sit at ease, to stand quietly, to talk read-ily to old or new friends, but it's hard advice to follow. After all, there's something to be said for the old-fashioned schools for girls, before the so-called "higher education" became common. They taught a little drawing—real drawing, not the kind of thing you can do with a pencil and a piece of paper. They taught a little singing and playing, without giving much knowledge of real music. They taught embroidery, which was not a waste of time to do, and they taught grace and social ease. Some one has wittily said they never taught a woman anything to say, but they did teach her how to say it.

I'd very much like to see some of the old "educational frills" introduced into our public schools. It's not that I want to sacrifice higher mathematics or advanced languages, but I do know we don't pay enough attention educationally to other languages. It's only that so many girls leave school and go to work that they have no more than their own voices. They're well developed mentally, but congenitally socially. They can pass exams easily, but fidget in company, avoid making new friends because they're self-conscious, or because they're not sure how they should act, so what-ever their brilliancy is, they're hopelessly overlooked.

To like to see girls have more classes in gymnastics to build them straight and strong, in voice development, so they would speak softly and with proper accent, in social manners, so they would not be self-conscious. That sort of thing can be taught. Our old-fashioned finishing schools proved it.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young girl 17 years old. I am a very good-looking and I have a fairly good shape. Only my legs are simply awful. I am around with two girls who aren't pretty but have such plump legs. It makes me heartless and I sit down and cry often, which I know is very foolish.

Could you tell me any way in which I could pad them so as to make them look big and plump and nice? I don't do it so that I can wear silk stockings and one couldn't tell the difference. I have studied and I cannot figure out how to do it. I know little slender legs are just awful. I need your advice.

DON'T FIDGET

It's easy enough to tell a girl to sit at ease, to stand quietly, to talk read-ily to old or new friends, but it's hard advice to follow. After all, there's something to be said for the old-fashioned schools for girls, before the so-called "higher education" became common. They taught a little drawing—real drawing, not the kind of thing you can do with a pencil and a piece of paper. They taught a little singing and playing, without giving much knowledge of real music. They taught embroidery, which was not a waste of time to do, and they taught grace and social ease. Some one has wittily said they never taught a woman anything to say, but they did teach her how to say it.

I'd very much like to see some of the old "educational frills" introduced into our public schools. It's not that I want to sacrifice higher mathematics or advanced languages, but I do know we don't pay enough attention educationally to other languages. It's only that so many girls leave school and go to work that they have no more than their own voices. They're well developed mentally, but congenitally socially. They can pass exams easily, but fidget in company, avoid making new friends because they're self-conscious, or because they're not sure how they should act, so what-ever their brilliancy is, they're hopelessly overlooked.

To like to see girls have more classes in gymnastics to build them straight and strong, in voice development, so they would speak softly and with proper accent, in social manners, so they would not be self-conscious. That sort of thing can be taught. Our old-fashioned finishing schools proved it.

YOUR BABY and MINE

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

Mrs. Eldred is happy to advise all mothers about the care of their children of any age, or on any subject which does not belong in the field of the doctor.

Carrying a baby during the hot weather is a greater trial than in the fall and best and most comfortable enough at best and the heat only adds to the burden. It is easier, though, at this time to keep the skin active and the skin is a valuable eliminative agent.

Now offer this tried-out method, the very means I long have used to get the hair which millions have admired.

My Hair Dress is a scientific product, based on the latest of hair study. It contains no grease, no oil. It was perfected by authorities who command respect. I abhor and avoid, as all women should, all the crude ways to beautify hair.

All toilet counters sell my Hair Dress; under guarantee. If the first bottle fails to satisfy, they return your money. Go see what a change it makes in your hair. Ask for Edna Wallace Hopper's Hair Dress—price, 75 cents.

Heart and Home Problems
BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON.
Letters May be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: My husband and I have been running around with a crowd of young married couples. We have gone to each other's homes for parties, to dances and to shows, and probably we have all been together at least twice a week.

The wife of one of the men in the crowd went to visit her mother for a month and when she came back we all got off the train she kissed all of us men and all. I didn't think it was proper for her to kiss the men. My husband, disagreeing with me and says that her kisses were merely of a friendly nature and didn't mean anything one way or another. What do you think about the matter?

ROSE LIE.

Your husband was right in his way of classifying the woman's kisses. It seems to me, however, that it would have been much better if she had kissed only her husband because then her kiss to him would have meant something.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young girl 17 years old. I am a very good-looking and I have a fairly good shape. Only my legs are simply awful. I am around with two girls who aren't pretty but have such plump legs. It makes me heartless and I sit down and cry often, which I know is very foolish.
